Comparing China and the West:
Who is ready for the challenge?
John G. Blair
Jerusha McCormack
Beijing Foreign Studies University

Comparative culture studies often seem to come up half-empty: the China specialist may object if half the readings focus not on China but the West, and the teacher of Western Civilization may object to half the class’s attention being turned away from the subject he or she was hired to teach.

From our experience, we have come to believe otherwise. As the authors of a one-semester comparative course, we have discovered that no one can comprehend a distant culture unless one is capable of comparing it with one’s own civilization. All too often, students do not seem to know even the rudiments of the origins of their own way of life.

Cultural amnesia seems to be dangerously widespread both in China and in the West, though for different reasons.

In China, students feel an intense need to understand the West, which is such a powerful influence in their world. At the same time, they are largely cut off from their own deep heritage by the after effects of the Cultural Revolution and related events. Hence, the Beijing Foreign Studies University, through its School of English and International Studies, has since 2003, made obligatory for its advanced students our course entitled WCwCC [Western Civilization with Chinese Comparisons]. Its sourcebook has been published by Fudan University Press in Shanghai.

We believe that this fresh approach to Asian Studies should now be tested in a North American liberal-arts setting. Western students are just beginning to realize how important China is. going to be throughout their 21st century lives. And at the same time, many suffer from serious cultural amnesia due to a long-term devaluing of their traditions.

As Westerners we have learned a great deal about cross-cultural education. 200 students at a time follow this course, making large lectures our primary pedagogical tool. But then, PowerPoint slides have proved to be also important, for reasons that go far beyond the numbers of students. Chinese students find it hard to absorb abstract concepts unless they are attending the class in detail. Similarly, many categories Westerners used to explain their world apply so awkwardly in China that they require radical redefinition if they are to be helpful. Among these categories are truth, reality and religion. Within a comparative perspective, these and similar concepts appear as cultural constructs, indispensable to the way Westerners look at the world but of uncertain application elsewhere. Similarly, an understanding of Chinese civilization depends on a variety of notions that require major reinterpretation if a Westerner is to make sense of them. Among these concepts are dao, yin & yang, and qi.

A quick test can illustrate many of the differences that impede mutual understanding: Think of three words: PANDA, MONKEY, BANANA. Without reflecting extensively, decide which two go most easily together. Most North Americans respond with PANDA and MONKEY, since both belong to a category we have learned: animals or mammals. Most East Asians, however, respond MONKEY and BANANA, since monkeys like to eat bananas. This kind of connection requires no abstract concept at all; it remains part of the down-to-earth practical world. Neither one of these responses is right or wrong, but they are worlds apart in the way they reflect the use of words and ideas.

Our job is to help people on both sides of this cultural divide understand how the others look at things, how they use their minds to make sense. Our primary tools are short texts, designed to be read on-screen. Drawn from both civilizations over the last 2000 years and more, these are selected and edited to facilitate this comparative purpose. Texts come with short introductions and study questions that suggest relevant lines of comparative analysis. In addition, we provide introductions to key terms that might otherwise seem confusing. We distribute materials in PDF format and include lots of background that is accessible primarily through clickable links.

In the West, if such a course exists, it probably follows a familiar chronological organization of the kind that has seemed “natural” in the West for the last few centuries. But the Chinese habitually approach history quite differently so we have divided the course into modules (“Encounters”) that focus attention on one of six domains of culture. These carry labels that are necessarily large and vague. For example, Encounter 5 concerns HUMANS AND AUTHORITY, a label spacious enough to include authorities that are spiritual as well as political. The list of readings below will allow interested parties to see the kinds of authors and texts we call on for our comparative purposes.

Further background about us and our project is available on our website: www.comparativeculturestudies.org.

So far we know of no other course like this in the world, though we would be delighted to learn of others that are similar in scope. For this very reason, we look to ASIANetwork colleagues for their responses.
Comparing China and the West

MAIN READINGS

Introductory Lecture Backgrounds

Week 1
Hour 1: Where Comparisons Begin: Mapping Ethnocentrism
Hour 2: Mind-Mapping in Chinese and English

Encounter 1: LEARNING (as enculturation)

1.1 Traditional Ideas and Practices

Week 2
Key Concepts:
Varieties of Knowledge
Western Texts:
  Education in Athens
  Spartan Alternatives: Xenophon
  Walter Ong: Agon in Western Education
China Texts:
  Kongzi: On Learning and Teaching
  Zhuangzi: What Can Be Learned But Not Taught
  Sanzijing: Serious Advice for Children
  Zhu Xi: Training Children
  Père du Halde: Early Qing Schooling
Comparison Texts:
  Traditional Sayings as Knowledge
  Kongzi and Socrates: Two Models of Sagehood

1.2 Modern Schooling

Week 3
Key Concepts:
Learner-centered versus Teacher-centered Education
Western Texts:
  Jean-Jacques Rousseau: Emile or, On Education
  Horace Mann: Justifications for Free Public
  Schools John Henry Newman: The Idea of a University
China Texts:
  Quotations from Mao Zedong
  Qian Qing, Teaching English in a Modern Chinese University
  PRC Education in Recent Decades
Comparison Texts:
  Comparative Guidelines for Argumentative Writing
  Writing Matters: Copyright and Plagiarism
Encounter 2: HUMANS IN FAMILIES

2.1 Traditional Family Practices

Week 4

Key Concepts:
- Filiality [Xiao]
- Monogamy
- Traditional Worldviews Based on Family Models

Western Texts:
- Adam and Eve Story
- St. Paul on Sexuality
- Saint Augustine: The Universality of Original Sin

China Texts:
- Zuozhuan: A Wife’s Dilemma
- Kongzi: On Family Matters
- Mozi: On Universal Filiality
- Mengzi: Filial Models
- Gu Hongming: A Proper Chinese Wife Has No Self

Comparison Texts:
- Xenophon: Advice for a Young Wife
- Ban Zhao: Lessons for Young Women

2.2 Modern Trends

Week 5

Key Concepts:
- Romantic Love and Modern Marriage

Western Texts:
- Two Models for Modern Western Families: George Lakoff
- Abandoning Family Traditions: Philippe Ariès on Modern Dying

China Texts:
- Reforming Family Traditions: Hu Shi on his Mother’s Funeral
- The PRC Marriage Law of 1950
- China Today: Revival of Family Trees

Comparison Texts:
- Howard Gardner: Chinese and American Parenting
  - Population Issues, East and West
Encounter 3: HUMANS THEMSELVES

3.1 Traditional Views
Week 6

Key Concepts:
- Longevity
- Western Ideas of the Body as Matter
- Comparative Immortalities

Western Texts:
- Human Nature according to the Western Tradition
- Plato: On Human Nature and Its Diseases
- The Classical Four-Humors Theory of Disease

China Texts:
- The Yellow Emperor’s Internal Medicine Classic
- The Qiema* Tradition in Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM)*

Comparison Texts:
- “Why Chinese Do Not Have ‘Bodies’ in a Western Sense”
- Comparative Pre-Modern Ideas of Selfhood

3.2 Modern Views
Week 7

Key Concepts:
- Modern Western Medicine
- Gender in Modern Western Cultures

Western Texts:
- Human Nature according to Psychology
- Sigmund Freud and Psychoanalysis
- Jean Baker Miller: A New Psychology of Women

China Texts:
- Medical Practices in China since 1900
- The Appeal of Psychology in China Today
- Liu Xin: “The Mirror and I”

Comparison Texts:
- TCM versus MWM: A Sample Case, 2005
- Comparative Feminine Beauty

Encounter 4: HUMANS AND THEIR SURROUNDINGS

4.1 Traditional Ideas
Week 8

Key Concepts:
- Dao: The Natural Way
- The Emergence of Economics Thinking
Western Texts:
   - The Creation of Nature (according to Genesis)
   - Xenophon: On Agriculture and War
   - Desiderius Erasmus: Against the Power of Money
China Texts:
   - Guan Zhong: Seeking Profit Is Human Nature
   - Kongzi: Compete without Competing
   - Zhuangzi’s Eden Story
   - Mengzi: Against the Profit Motive
   - Han Dynasty Debates on Iron and Salt
Comparison Texts:
   - Pastoral: Cultural Parallels

4.2 Modern Dilemmas: Economics versus Ecology
Week 9

Key Concepts:
   - Capitalism(s)
   - Market Economy
   - Modernization as an Economic Concept
Western Texts:
   - Milton Friedman: On Adam Smith Today
   - Karl Polanyi: Fictions in Free Market Economics
   - The Limits to Growth: The Club of Rome
China Texts:
   - The Chinese Economic Miracle
   - The Terrible Cost of China’s Growth
Comparison Texts:
   - Ecology at the Start of the 21st Century: J. R. McNeill, Something New under the Sun

Encounter 5: HUMANS AND AUTHORITY

5.1 Traditional Authorities
Week 10

Key Concepts:
   - Justice and Natural Law
   - Lizhi, Fazhi, Renzhi in Chinese Governance
Western Texts:
   - Aristotle: On Greek Governance
   - Justinian’s Code: Roman Legal Categories
   - Western Types of Government
Comparing China and the West

5.2 Modern Authorities

Key Concepts:

Social Contract
Rights and Human Rights
Liberty versus Equality

Western Texts:

Copernicus and Science as Cultural Authority
Thomas Hobbes: Humans Need a Sovereign
Jean-Jacques Rousseau: On States and Sovereigns

China Texts:

Sun Zhongshan: Three Stages of Revolution
The PRC Dual Governing System
Wei Luo: The 1997 Criminal Code of the PRC
Deng Xiaoping: PRC Perspectives on “Human Rights”

Comparison Texts:

“Rule of Law” versus “The Rule of Law”: Randall Peerenboom, China’s Long March toward Rule of Law

Encounter 6: VALUES AND WORLDVIEWS

6.1 Traditional Orientations

Key Concepts:

Divination
Fundamental Mindsets, Western and Chinese

Western Texts:

The [Hebrew] Ten Commandments
Epictetus: The Art of Living Stoically
Jesus of Nazareth: The Sermon on the Mount
Varieties of Judeo-Christian Ethics

China Texts:

Yijing: The Book of Changes
Zhuangzi: On What We Can Know
Xunzi: “Do Not Look to Heaven for Explanations”
Fortune or Misfortune: “Old Sai Lost His Horse”

Comparison Texts:
Ming Critiques of Christianity

6.2 Modern Tendencies
Week 13

Key Concepts:
Quantification
Probability
The Idea of Progress
Western Morality and Ethics

Western Texts:
René Descartes: “I Think Therefore I Am” [Cogito Ergo Sum]
Robert Pirsig: Two Ways of Knowing
Pragmatism as an Alternative: Richard Rorty

China Texts:
Hu Shi: On John Dewey on Experience
Five Chinese Generations since 1949

Comparison Texts:
Contemporary Socio-economic Systems: Daniel A. Bell, Beyond Liberal Democracy

Review: Post-Modern Challenges to Western Traditions
Week 14

Preface: THE INTERNET AS POST-MODERN

Encounter 1 CULTURAL UNLEARNING
Comparative Skepticisms: Jacques Derrida and Zhuangzi

Encounter 2 HUMANS IN FAMILIES
Same-Sex Marriage

Encounter 3 HUMANS THEMSELVES
Euthanasia

Encounter 4 HUMANS AND THEIR SURROUNDINGS
Post-Modern Science: Chaos Theory

Encounter 5 HUMANS AND AUTHORITY
Supra-National Authorities: The European Union

Encounter 6 VALUES AND WORLDVIEWS
Post-Modern Study of Humanity: Anthropology

Postscript: POST-MODERNITY AS “EASTERNIZING”?